

Throttle Back Grille Opens at Stinson Municipal Airport

SAN ANTONIO— (November 17, 2014)

With a view of historic Stinson's airfield, Throttle Back Grill will celebrate its opening with a ribbon cutting at 11:00 a.m. on Monday, November 17. Restaurateurs Ami and Clint Powell will be bringing an aviation theme to their grille. Clinton, who served in the U.S. Air Force and is a multiengine pilot and the current Mayor of Pleasanton, Texas. The owners wanted to incorporate their love of aviation into the restaurant that will feature a casual-dining menu that includes; hamburgers, sandwiches and salads. "We are excited to add this venue to a growing list of new businesses in the heart of South San Antonio, said Councilwoman Viagran."

In December 2015, San Antonio's Stinson Municipal Airport will mark its 100th year since its founding. As the nation's second oldest continuously operating airport, Stinson has not only played a significant role in the history of the nation's aviation and military history but continues to thrive as a general aviation airport to this day.
